

Camp Durant

By: B Bordeaux

When we got there we unloaded the gear and set up tents and hammocks. After that the patrols started campfires. Then went to sleep, about 30 percent of the people had hammocks.

When the patrols woke up it was cold. After we got our cold weather gear on we fixed breakfast. In the picture with the pancake in the fire the Cobra patrol burnt many pancakes and bacon. They burnt most of them until the ASPL came.

Then we waited around for a while until Mr.H. told us to fall in for shooting. He separated us into people who wanted to shoot shotguns and people how wanted to shoot rifles

The highlight of this weekend was that we got to go shooting rifles and shotguns. The shotguns were much more popular, but luckily, everyone got to go shooting once or twice. Also, for those who went shotgun shooting got to take home a piece of the clay pigeon that they shot down, and for the marksmen, they got to take home their target if they wanted to.

Unfortunately, the night was very cold, and lots of the patrols had to stock up on fire wood before night fell. We spent a little while collecting the wood necessary for the fire. After we had collected the wood, then we started the camp fire and enjoyed the warm fire.
