

Webelos Woods

By C. Adler

On this campout, we were camping next to the Webelos at Camp Reeves.

After the first chilly night, all the patrols were ready to teach something to the Webelos. Each patrol taught different things. They taught fire safety, flag etiquette, cooking, knots and others. In cooking, they were making pizzas in Dutch ovens, but didn't have enough time to cook it properly, so the pizzas came out undercooked. In flag etiquette they were taught about how to treat flags, how to fold and raise a flag. In knots, they learned to tie knots, and in fire safety, they were taught about what to do about fires and how to tend to them.

On Saturday night, Bobby's hammock was tied to a tree (that was dead) and it fell down onto him and broke his trunk.
