

Camp Woodfield West

E Kightlinger

On Friday, April 23-28, Boy Scout Troop 200 drove to Camp Woodfield West.

The next morning the Boy Scouts split into their patrols to roam around the North Carolina Zoo. One of the most popular animals at the Zoo is the Polar Bear. It seemed like he had a dance routine. But apparently he was just trying to get a ball. First he would come up for air, then dive down and push off the wall while doing an underwater spiral.

At the desert exhibit, the sand cat stood out. It was sleeping but it was still cool.

Finally, the Frostbite patrol found a lot of animal sculptures that they liked to climb on.

After the zoo, we came back to camp. We played games and got our stuff ready to leave the next morning.
